

United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women

Review of Corporate Gender Equality Evaluations in the UN System

Marco Segone, Director Independent Evaluation Office Sept 2015

Purpose

QCPR, by providing evidence on what works and what does not work in mainstreaming GEEW in UN entities.

Progress, but not yet evaluated

Methodology

- Led by UN-Women, in consultation with UNEG, EvalPartners and EvalGender.
- 17 corporate gender equality evaluations completed between2006 and 2014; 55% of UN-SWAP reporting entities
- UN-SWAP as the analytical framework:
  - accountability, results-based management, oversight, human and financial resources, capacity development, and coherence.

Accountability

Gender equality policies need to be further grounded and contextualized within UN entity mandates and strategic planning documents

Gender responsive performance management systems need to be further developed and assessed for effectiveness.

Results Based Management

UN entities need to further strengthen inclusion of gender analysis within corporate and country-level strategic planning documents

UN entities need to strengthen monitoring and reporting of gender mainstreaming results at the outcome level, including by better linking them to the overall organizational monitoring system

women Oversight

More evaluative evidence is needed on gender mainstreaming performance and the linkages between gender performance and gender development results.

UN entities would benefit from further methodological guidance for conducting corporate gender equality evaluations.

 Programme review processes should integrate GEEW criteria more systematically and compliance considered a key condition for approval.

Human and Financial Resources

 UN entities' gender architectures need to be made 'fitfor-purpose' to drive gender mainstreaming institutionally.

There should be a shift in focus from gender parity rates to in-depth analysis of the factors that support/impede it.

Enhance actual implementation of supportive policies that promote GEEW in the workplace.

Capacity Development

GEEW capacity development strategies need to be developed, resourced, and implemented if UN staff is expected to effectively implement gender mainstreaming within their work.

Coherence, knowledge and information management

UN entities would benefit from developing formal knowledge management strategies and tracking the use of knowledge products.

 More focus is needed on improving coherence on GEEW at country-level.

Other issues identified

Different methods and approaches need to be developed to address the specific challenges for gender mainstreaming in humanitarian settings.

Final Conclusion

Gender mainstreaming is a complex undertaking

 Evidence of good practice in gender mainstreaming and challenges

Validated the UN-SWAP performance indicators

Momentum needs to be maintained and bar raised
